

AForce — Investor Deck Slide Guide

A slide-by-slide explanation of the AForce investor deck (24 slides). Use this as speaker notes or a narrative map. The deck is built as one continuous argument: a product becomes a ritual, a ritual becomes behavior, behavior becomes retention, retention becomes a recurring membership business.

The deck moves through six acts:

SECTION	SLIDES	JOB
The Stakes	1–2	Set the emotional premise and define who this is for.
The Team	3–5	Establish credibility — the platform, the founders, the advisors.
The Opportunity	6–8	Size the market, expose the gap, claim the white space.
The System	9–13	Show the product is a system , not a beverage.
The Plan	14–21	Prove how the system compounds into a defensible, fundable business.
The Close	22–24	Make the ask, restate the thesis, invite the partnership.

THE STAKES

Slide 1 — Performance Is Non-Negotiable

The cinematic opener. One image, one truth: for the people AForce serves, performance isn't optional. It sets the tone — premium, serious, editorial — and frames everything that follows as high-stakes rather than lifestyle.

Slide 2 — Built For People Who Don't Get To Be Off

Defines the audience: founders, athletes, operators, creators — people whose performance matters every single day. This narrows the market from “everyone who drinks beverages” to a specific, high-value, always-on customer.

THE TEAM

Slide 3 — Selected For America's Real Deal

The credibility hook. AForce was chosen from hundreds of companies for a nationally televised investment platform airing January 2027. This raise builds the proof the company walks onto that national stage with — it gives the round urgency and a concrete deadline.

Slide 4 — The Founders

Lived conviction. The founders built the standard they needed themselves — this is framed as a real operating company, not a beverage looking for a story. Establishes founder–market fit.

Slide 5 — The Advisors

“The people behind the people.” Signals that AForce is backed by operators who have built, scaled, and exited at the highest level — Peter Ingwersen (cultural architect / brand builder), Kristel van Kleef (brand strategy & ecosystem design), Mark Mendel (investment banking, Finalis), and Thomas Masterbouni (CIO, Big Idea Ventures). De-risks execution.

THE OPPORTUNITY

Slide 6 — The Prize

Sizes the market. Performance hydration is evolving beyond “energy” into readiness, recovery, and daily ritual. Shows an illustrative market size to frame the upside.

Slide 7 — The Category Is Noise

The problem with the incumbents. Monster, Celsius, Prime, Ghost, Gatorade — every brand fights for attention. Almost none compete for composure. This sets up the wedge AForce drives in.

Slide 8 — The White Space

The positioning claim. AForce owns the moment before execution — the pause before performance — the white space the category left empty. The full product lineup is shown floating in that space.

THE SYSTEM

Slide 9 — The Ritual

The core behavioral idea in four beats: Pause. Hydrate. Lock In. Perform. No explanation needed — it’s a ritual, not a feature list. This is the heartbeat of the brand.

Slide 10 — The Three Signals That Matter

The proof metrics that show this is a system, not a drink: NPS 60+ (people believe), 60-day retention 60%+ (people stay), membership conversion 20%+ (people commit). Together they prove durable behavior.

Slide 11 — The System

How the business actually works: products create acquisition; the OS powers and measures retention. Hydration is the entry point that leads all the way to community.

Slide 12 — The Framework

Six steps, one compounding system: product → ritual → behavior → retention → membership → scale. Each stage is measurable, each has a KPI, and each earns the next. Reinforces that the OS is what powers and measures retention.

Slide 13 — Customer Journey

The full lifecycle from first sip to membership: Discover → Purchase → Activate → Ritual → Behavior → Results → Athlete Mode → Membership → Advocate. Shows how a one-time product purchase compounds into recurring revenue and advocacy.

THE PLAN

Slide 14 — What Momentum Looks Like

The interim launch milestones that lead to the proof: Day-30 retention, OS activation, weekly engagement, ritual adoption. These are the checkpoints to be hit before January 2027 — momentum, not just a destination.

Slide 15 — The Compounding System

Why the whole is greater than the parts: every layer compounds the last. Product creates entry, ritual creates behavior, the OS creates retention, membership creates recurring revenue, the ecosystem creates scale.

Slide 16 — The Moat

Why this is defensible: the more you use AForce, the harder it is to leave. Built on accumulated performance data, streak psychology, and identity formation — switching costs that grow over time.

Slide 17 — The Proof Engine

The go-to-market wedge. Miami and Brickell provide a dense, concentrated population of high-performance consumers — the ideal place to generate proof quickly and visibly.

Slide 18 — Road To America's Real Deal

The sequenced path to the national stage: soft launch → proof of concept → community scale → national television. Shows the plan is staged and deliberate.

Slide 19 — What Success Looks Like By January 2027

The Phase 1 target dashboard: 1,000 OS users, 600 DAU, NPS 60+, 60% 60-day retention, 20% membership conversion, 250 Brickell attendees, 21-day average streak. Concrete, measurable goals tied to the deadline.

Slide 20 — The Economics

The unit economics: CAC, LTV, subscription conversion, repeat purchase, gross margin, and revenue forecast (illustrative assumptions). Translates the behavioral story into a financial one.

Slide 21 — Why Invest Today

The closing argument before the ask: behavioral readiness is an open category; national validation comes through America's Real Deal; membership economics create recurring revenue; and the GTM is proof-driven, not hope-driven.

THE CLOSE

Slide 22 — The Ask

The raise: $4M, allocated across product and inventory, marketing, technology, and team and operations.
Restates the audience line: built for people who don't get to be off.

Slide 23 — The Close

The thesis in one line: this isn't about proving people like a hydration product — it's Product → Ritual → Behavior → Retention → Membership → Scale. The proof sequence is the business.

Slide 24 — Contact

The invitation: join before the national stage. Founders Brandon and Julius Burrell, New York HQ, drinkaforce.com.
The mission stated plainly — a readiness ritual becoming a recurring membership business, built for people who don't get to be off.
